One day a parcel came for Ben.
 "It's the smallest parcel I've ever seen," said the postman. It fitted easily into the palm of Ben's hand. He stared at it.

"Whatever can it be?" Dad wondered. Slowly Ben unwrapped the parcel. Inside was a big blue seed.

There was a letter, too, from his uncle in Borneo.

Dear Ben,
 This is the seed from a fantastic plant. I found it growing in the jungle with lots of other plants. I was walking underneath it and this seed fell right into my hands. I thought you might like to grow it in a pot.

"How exciting," cried Mum. She helped Ben to find a pot and he planted the blue seed carefully.

"All the way from Borneo!" he said. "I hope the plant will be happy here."

That evening Ben put the pot beside his bed and went to sleep.

The next morning, he woke up to feel something tickling his face. The seed had grown very fast during the night. It was now a huge plant with bright green leaves!

"Amazing!" cried Mum.

"Astonishing!" cried Dad.

"Fantastic!" cried Ben.

Mum said, "Take it to school and show your teacher."
